

HAMBOORG.CITY

Free platform for foreigners in Germany

- ✓ 24/7 Assistant in Your Language
- ✓ Official Document Scanner
- ✓ Deadline Reminders
- ✓ Benefit Calculators

hamboorg.city — is and will be FREE

Name Change in Germany — Process, Costs, and Reasons

How to change your first or last name in Germany: reasons, procedure, required documents, and costs.

Deutsche Begriffe: Namensänderung | Standesamt | Vorname | Nachname | Namensklärung | Gebühren

When Can I Change My Name?

In Germany, a Namensänderung (name change) is not simple — you need a valid reason. This is because your name serves for identification and should not be changed arbitrarily.

There are two types of Namensänderung:

- 1. Private law Namensänderung — upon marriage, divorce, or adoption (through Standesamt, relatively simple)
- 2. Public law Namensänderung — for other reasons (through Standesamt or the name change authority, more difficult)

Private Law Namensänderung — Automatic Occasions

Upon Marriage

- You can adopt your partner's name as your married name
- Double name possible (e.g., Müller-Schmidt)
- Both can retain their names
- Application at the Standesamt when registering the marriage

Upon Divorce

- You can resume your birth name
- Or retain your married name
- Or resume a former married name
- Application at the Standesamt after the divorce

Upon Adoption

- Minors: automatically receive the adoptive parents' name
- Adults: Namensänderung possible upon request

For Children

- Einbenennung: stepchild receives the new spouse's name (§ 1618 BGB) — consent of both biological parents required
- Change of family name for unmarried parents' children possible

Public Law Namensänderung — Valid Reasons

If you want to change your name without marriage/divorce/adoption, you need a valid reason (§ 3 NamÄndG):

Recognized Reasons

- Psychological distress caused by the name (e.g., offensive, ridiculous, hard to pronounce)
- Gender reassignment — for transgender individuals (since 2024 also possible via Selbstbestimmungsgesetz)
- Severe psychological distress caused by the old name (e.g., due to violence, stalking, abuse)
- Religious conversion — if the old name doesn't fit the new faith
- Integration — adapting a foreign name to German spelling or choosing a German name

Insufficient Reasons

- "I simply don't like my name"
- Fashion reasons (celebrity name, etc.)

- Simple dislike of the surname
- Family conflicts alone (without special distress)

Special Case: Foreign Names

Foreigners have easier conditions:

- Angleichungserklärung (§ 94 BVFG) — you can adapt your name to German spelling (e.g., latinize Cyrillic or Arabic names)
- Naturalization — during naturalization, you can adapt your name or choose a German name
- Hard-to-pronounce names — shortening or simplification is possible if the name causes problems in everyday German life

How Do I Apply for a Namensänderung?

Responsible Authority

- Standesamt — for Namensänderung upon marriage, divorce, birth
- Namensänderungsbehörde (name change authority) — for public law changes (usually the Standesamt or Ordnungsamt of your city)
- Court — for disputes or rejections

Required Documents

- ID card or passport + residence permit
- Birth certificate (current, not older than 6 months)
- Residence certificate
- Justification — written explanation of the valid reason
- Supporting documents — e.g., psychological assessment, police report, medical certificate
- If previously married: Marriage certificate and divorce judgment
- Consent declaration of spouse (for name changes of married persons)
- For children: Consent of both parents (and child from age 5)

Process

- 1. Consultation at the Standesamt/Namensänderungsbehörde

- 2. Submit application with all documents
- 3. Review by the authority (possibly hearing third parties: spouse, police)
- 4. Decision — approval or rejection (processing time: 2-12 months)
- 5. Implementation — update ID documents, accounts, contracts with new name

Costs

Type of Namensänderung	Cost
Namensänderung upon marriage/divorce	€25-50
Public law Namensänderung (surname)	€50-1,500
Public law Namensänderung (first name)	€25-500
Angleichungserklärung (for foreigners)	€25-60
ID card (reissue)	€37
Passport (reissue)	€70

Fees for public law Namensänderung depend on your income and the difficulty of the case.

What Must I Do After the Namensänderung?

Immediately

- ID card and passport — apply for new ones
- Residence permit — update (Immigration Office)
- Residence certificate — update (Registration Office)
- Tax ID — remains the same, but inform the tax office

Within a Few Weeks

- Bank — change account name, order new debit card
- Employer — notify of new name (payroll, social insurance)
- Health insurance — request new card
- Insurance policies — update all insurances
- Landlord — name plate, doorbell, rental agreement

- Postal service — set up mail forwarding (6 months, €28.90)

Later

- Driver's license — update Namensänderung (recommended)
- Vehicle registration — update registration document
- Diplomas/Certificates — usually the old name remains; reissuance is often possible
- Contracts — mobile phone contract, electricity contract, gym membership, etc.

Selbstbestimmungsgesetz (since November 2024)

Since November 1, 2024, the Selbstbestimmungsgesetz (SBGG) applies: transgender, intersex, and non-binary persons can change their gender entry and first name at the Standesamt — without expert assessment or court proceedings.

Process

- 1. Declaration at the Standesamt — in person, notify 3 months in advance
- 2. Self-certification — you declare that the change corresponds to your gender identity
- 3. Waiting period: 3 months between notification and declaration
- 4. Costs: approx. €30-50

Tips for Foreigners

- 1. Use Angleichungserklärung — simpler and cheaper than regular Namensänderung
- 2. During naturalization — adapt your name simultaneously (saves fees)
- 3. Documents from your home country — bring birth certificate with apostille and translation
- 4. Consultation — migration counseling can help with questions about name law